The Maria Grzegorzewska University PL WARSZAW04

Accademic year   2023-2024     Area subject code   -     Title of course   Technology – impacts on individuals and global challenges.     Level   I (undergraduate – B.A. $$ ) II (graduate – M.A. $$ )     Time   1st semester $$ or 2nd semester $$ of implementation   Ist semester $$ or 2nd semester $$ Number of hours   15     ECTS   3     Lecturer(s)   Sergo Kuruliszwili     (name and last name)   Institute of Education     (Institute, division)   Institute of Education     (Institute, division)   The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.     The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.     Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the conomy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology. Sudents will explore questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and r		Courses in foreign languages Title of course     Technology – impacts on individuals and global challenges.       Level     I (undergraduate – B.A. √) II (graduate – M.A. √)       Time     1st semester √ or 2nd semester √       of implementation     15       Number of hours     15       ECTS     3       Lecturer(s)     Sergo Kuruliszwili (name and last name)       Title/position     Dr. hab.       Affiliation (Institute, division)     Institute of Education       Course description (up to 600 words)     The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.       The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.       Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological progress.       One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation.	Academic year	2023-2024
LevelI(undergraduate $-B.A$ , $$ )II(graduate $-M.A$ , $$ )Time1st semester $$ or 2nd semester $$ of implementation1st semester $$ or 2nd semester $$ Number of hours15ECTS3Lecturer(s)Sergo Kuruliszwili(name and last name)Title/positionDr. hab.AffiliationInstitute of Education(Institute, division)Course descriptionThe course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technological advancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation.By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technologi innovation.By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shapi	5	-
Time of implementation   Ist semester √ or 2nd semester √     of implementation   15     ECTS   3     Lecturer(s) (name and last name)   Sergo Kuruliszwili     Title/position   Dr. hab.     Affiliation (Institute, division)   Institute of Education     Course description (up to 600 words)   The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.     The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.     Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technological aprogress.     One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological alvancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation.     By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.     Requ	Title of course	Technology – impacts on individuals and global challenges. of implementation     15       Number of hours     15       ECTS     3       Lecturer(s)     Sergo Kuruliszwili       (name and last name)     Dr. hab.       Affiliation     Institute of Education       (Institute, division)     The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.       The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.       Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation.       By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.       Required readings     Lecture / lab. training Number of hours     15       ECTS     3       Lecturer(s)     Sergo Kuruliszwili       (name and last name)     Institute of Education       Affiliation     Institute of Education       (Institute, division)     The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.       The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.       Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.       One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation.       By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.       Required readings     Lecture / lab. training		1st semester $$ or 2nd semester $$
ECTS     3       Lecturer(s)     Sergo Kuruliszwili       (name and last name)     Dr. hab.       Affiliation     Institute of Education       (Institute, division)     The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.       The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.       Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.       One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation.       By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.       Required readings     Teaching methods     Lecture / lab. training		17 Lecturer(s) (name and last name)     Sergo Kuruliszwili       Title/position     Dr. hab.       Affiliation (Institute, division)     Institute of Education       Course description (up to 600 words)     The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.       The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.       Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.       One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation.       By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.       Required readings     Lecture / lab. training (name and last name)     Institute of Education       Affiliation (Institute, division)     Institute of Education       Course description (up to 600 words)     The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.       The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.       Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technological progress.       One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological progress.       One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation.       By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.       Required readings     Lecture / lab. training Title/position     Dr. hab.       Affiliation (Institute, division)     Institute of Education       Course description (up to 600 words)     The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.       The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.       Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.       One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological innovation.       By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.       Required readings     I       Teaching methods     Lecture / lab. training	× /	Serge Kurunszwin Affiliation (Institute, division)   Institute of Education     Course description (up to 600 words)   The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.     The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.     Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.     One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation.     By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.     Required readings   Lecture / lab. training     Teaching methods   Lecture / lab. training	. ,	Dr. hab.
Course description (up to 600 words)   The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements. The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics. Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress. One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological advancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.   Required readings Lecture / lab. training   Teaching methods Lecture / lab. training		Institute of Education (up to 600 words)world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements. The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics. Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress. One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readingsTeaching methodsLecture / lab. training Prerequisites World around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and social implications of technological advancements.     The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.     Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.     One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation.     By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.     Required readings     Teaching methods   Lecture / lab. training	1	The course " explores the ways in which technology affects our lives and the social implications of technological advancements.The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readings-Teaching methodsLecture / lab. trainingPrerequisites-	(up to 600 words)	world around us. It examines the positive and negative impacts of technology on The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics. Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress. One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readingsLecture / lab. training PrerequisitesLecture / lab. training		individuals, communities, and the environment, and considers the ethical and and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics. Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress. One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readingsLecture / lab. training PrerequisitesLecture / lab. training		social implications of technological advancements.
current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics. Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress. One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readingsLecture / lab. trainingTreaching methodsLecture / lab. training		The course begins by examining the historical and cultural context of technology, artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress. One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readingsLecture / lab. training Prerequisites		and how it has shaped human society over time. It then moves on to explore the
Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress. One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readingsLecture / lab. trainingPrerequisites-		current state of technology, including the latest developments in areas such as various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress. One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readingsLecture / lab. training -Prerequisites-		artificial intelligence, social media, cybersecurity and robotics.
also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readings		Throughout the course, students will learn about the impact of technology on privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.     One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation.     By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.     Required readings		various aspects of society, including the economy, politics, and culture. They will
Image: Provide the second se		also examine the challenges posed by technology, such as the digital divide, surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore     questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left     behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation.     By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the     complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to     engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.     Required readings     Teaching methods   Lecture / lab. training     -		privacy concerns, and the environmental impact of technological progress.
questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left     behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation.     By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the     complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to     engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.     Required readings     Teaching methods   Lecture / lab. training     Prerequisites   -		One important issue that the course addresses is the ethical considerations
Image: Provide the second s		surrounding the development and use of technology. Students will explore
By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.Required readingsImage: Course of technology in shaping our future.Teaching methodsLecture / lab. trainingPrerequisites-		questions such as who benefits from technological advancements, who is left complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.     Required readings     Teaching methods   Lecture / lab. training     Prerequisites   -		behind, and who bears the costs and risks of technological innovation.
Required readings     Teaching methods     Prerequisites		By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of the Required readings   Teaching methods   Prerequisites		complex relationship between technology and society, and will be equipped to Teaching methods Lecture / lab. training   Prerequisites -		engage in critical discussions about the role of technology in shaping our future.
Prerequisites -	Required readings
	Teaching methods	Lecture / lab. training
Assessment Class activity + final project presentation		-
	Assessment	Class activity + final project presentation

Courses in foreign languages

Teaching language	English
Contact person for	Sergo Kuruliszwili
further information	sergo@aps.edu.pl
(name, e-mail, phone)	604423135