

Title of course: Human Rights

Lecturer: prof. Anna Odrowąż-Coates

Teaching language: English

Course description: The course will discuss Human Rights issues, Human Rights violations and the international mechanisms of protecting the rights of minority groups and of children.

Students will be introduced to international and national policies. Moreover, participants will examine ethnographic materials on the subject matter.

The aim of the course will be to raise awareness of cultural differences and social inequalities in the light of universal human rights. At the same time, participants will pose questions about the ethnocentric bias and social order in a variety of countries.

The course will encourage independent research into international legislation and statistics on human rights issues.

The course will enhance the students' vocabulary in this area of expertise. It will aid individual independent research, critical text analysis, teamwork and confidence in sharing ideas in English.

Assessment (ZO): To pass weekly presence and active participation are required.

Students may expect small weekly tasks for self-study and a final essay or research report.
